The Maizière Family has a long history in the region, being present in Burgundy since at least the 12th century when the Cistercian Abbey of Maizière was constructed in the town of Beaune. While it is unlikely that the family's ancestors were, in fact, monks themselves, they were definitely working for the monks on their vineyards during this time. It was not until Pierre Maizière moved from his native Meursault to Beaune in 1969 that the family's 10 centuries of history-making wine in the region was realised.

Pierre established a strong reputation for producing high-quality wines that reflected both the terroir and the region's winemaking tradition. Now 87, Pierre has handed the reigns to his two children, Anne and Pascal, although he still carefully watches over the destiny of the reputation that he built over the years. Pascal, a qualified oenologist, and Anne, a wine marketing and sales veteran with over 25 years of experience, have breathed new life into the business founded by their father.
