

MOLANA RASHEH

SKU: ARMMR

Modern-day Iran once had one of the world's most thriving wine industries. The warm climate of medieval Persia made it an ideal location for viticulture, and even today the Shiraz grape takes its name from the southern Iranian city. Persian poets such as Rumi and Hafez famously sung the praises of their local wines. With the 1979 Islamic Revolution, however, over 300 wineries were shut down overnight, and production of the wines in this incredible tradition ceased – until now. Keush's Molana Rasheh keeps this long history alive, offering a unique link to the past while looking forward to a brighter future.
